Introduction to Data Systems

This document specifies, in binding terms, the acceptable use for a remote student, in the Fall of 2020, to use and/or print the in-publication textbook employed in CS-181 and DA-210.

I Understand

- I understand that the book, "Introduction to Data Systems", by Thomas Bressoud and David White, is copyrighted material. This is the book with ISBN: 978-3-030-54370-9 for the eventual hardcover, and ISBN: 978-3-030-54371-6 for the eventual eBook, and referenced by Springer at the link: https://www.springer.com/us/book/9783030543709

- I understand that the copyright for the textbook is held exclusively by Springer-Nature.

- I understand that the terms of copyright and the terms of the acceptable use specified in this document apply regardless of country.

- I understand that use of the textbook applies to any form of the textbook, including print versions, version in PDF, versions in HTML, or in any other electronic or derived form.

- I understand that, if I receive a copy of the book in any form prior to publication, I am bound by the same laws of copyright.

- I understand that I am not allowed to put an eletronic copy of the book (PDF, HTML, or any other derived form) on any machine other than the laptop or machine I use for my academic work.

- I understand that I am not allowed to print or copy the book and then give it to anyone else. I can print copies for my own exclusive use during the semester of this class.

- I understand that if I intentionally or unintentionally give access to this book through post or social media or email or any other form of distribution, I am in violation of copyright and of the terms of acceptable use by which I am getting access to this copyrighted material.

Signature

Print Name:

-

Signature: